5	(Kobi) Memorize / Share		text The concepts of the Biosphere, generative processes, and new urbanised public spaces are interrelated in several ways. The Biosphere refers to the outer layer of the Earth, including the atmosphere, hydrosphere, and lithosphere, and the processes that shape it, both abiotic and biotic. Generative processes, on the other hand, refer to the methods or techniques used to create or produce something, such as in art, music, or design. In the context of urbanised public spaces, generative processes can refer to the methods used to create new spaces or to transform existing ones....
